To Our Clear View Community:

With one week behind us, we wish we could say with certainty when we could all get back to business as usual. But, of course, none of us can do that just yet. What we can say with certainty is that our students have been very active in their Google Classrooms and our staff very active -- well beyond regular "school" hours -- in engaging and responding; and, so many of our parents, especially of our youngest students, have been working alongside their children, day by day, while trying to work remotely themselves. Staff is reaching out by phone as well as we know it is important at times to just hear each other's voices; and, of course, family therapists are beginning to have video appointments on a regular schedule. So much more than academic learning is going on between us -- our community is pulling together.

Districts are aware of our program and your students will be receiving credit for their school work they complete just as they would have if we were in session. Annual reviews are also being conducted remotely, when possible, so that when we can resume classes, we can do so without delay. We will keep you posted. Until then, keep in close touch.
